The Polynesian Cultural Center of Tahiti is a UNESCO World Heritage Site and is located on an island in the south of French Polynesia. It was built as a place where native and Tahitian culture could flourish and be preserved. It was inaugurated on May 21, 1970 with the hope of achieving the reconciliation between the two cultures. It is modeled after the famous longhouses of Polynesia, where the different Polynesian tribes could come together and live in harmony. The architecture of the center is a mix of the French built colonial style architecture and the native Tahitian style of architecture. The center can host up to 12,000 visitors at one time. To get a better idea of what the Polynesian Cultural Center is all about, go to www.pccvt.org Welcome to the first official trailer for Black Home. We hope you have a wonderful time taking a look at this game for the first time!

Updated with new animation and model! Pre-order Black Home now on Steam and GOG. Key features: > Explore a spooky mansion, where your main objective is to find your deceased fiance and get out alive! > Created using a special AI engine, controlled by the player. > Do you like mysterious stories? Do you like horror? Have you ever checked out the news? > Black Home is based on real-world events from the past. You can play as an explorer in the past... Black Home is a survival game, inspired by a number of real events from the past, and the moon, as well as a real disaster on Easter Sunday in 1980, which occurred on Easter Sunday, March 31, 1980 in which 4 people died and 17 were injured. The Easter Sunday Disaster would be the first United States disaster caused by a full moon. It was the result of a combination of the phenomenon that the first spring moon is a "full moon", also known as a "blood moon", and the unfortunate coincidence of a solar eclipse that occurred a few hours before. The eclipse occurred on the New Moon. The New Moon occurs once per month, when the moon is between New Earth and Old Earth, and so New Moon presents new opportunities for life. Things are not necessarily as they seem to be in Black Home, however; it's clear that in certain parts of the narrative it was meant as a work of fiction.

In this game we use a siding board (or as they call them in England; "A meter") to cover the gymnasium. This defines the workout areas and exercises on the game. When you are in this workout mode the results that you achieve will be stored in that location to show your record for the location (Exercises and times that you achieved). The workouts are graded on an individual basis. In this game is a simple to use in-game training system where you get to decide how to train your body. You will get a choice of exercises to choose from (your right hand). First you select the exercise type (Core exercise, Weight exercise, Bodyweight exercise etc). Then you select your desired exercise level. Then you can choose what bodyparts you want to work on with the selected exercise level. After you are in a workout mode you will see a count down and a measure of the time until you must press start. Once you start to exercise you will see a visual guide of what to do and what areas to choose. There is a workout picture for each exercise you use. There are also custom workout options where you can have bodyweight (isolations) exercises. These will be an extra type of exercise that you have to choose. The exercise will be in a form of a workout with a limited number of exercises. Please note before downloading. The official Boot Camp Fitness app will automatically import the content from the saved map/results for the level you completed, and the level you are on. If you do not have sufficient free space on your device for the data and do not have a SD card, you will have to manually export the workout file, save it to your SD card, relaunch the Boot Camp Fitness app, and then import the saved workout map in the app. You can also import this file in the Boot Camp Mobile app from the Fitness section (it should be and the Pied Piper of AirPair Our target market for premium SSL certificates is companies, educational institutions, and non-profits. Indeed, our customers do not pay anything for the certificate. Rather, as a thank-you we charge them a reoccurring monthly fee for the extra service we provide -Monitoring, Reporting, and Support. We began on a little known, but useful wordpress plugin called Pheed - the predecessor to SmartPIPE. On that journey, we ended up with a product that garnered lots of interest among admin's of non-profits, government agencies, and educational institutions. The numbers were so good they were starting to give us trouble, and we decided to focus on a bigger market than the one we had targeted. We pivoted, and started focusing on a niche that had greater potential, but smaller numbers. The niche? Online Gamers. They and their parents rule the day in the land of internet. Our first attempt at targeting the online gamer market included a special browser plugin that allowed viewers of our online gaming platforms to access our premium SSL Certificate, but that unfortunately only helped them view our content not to play it. We knew we could do better with this: A browser plugin that displayed a domain banner displaying our certificate, open to a link to our game (similar to what most modern browsers prompt when their users attempt to log in to a website using a different domain such as Also that link was taken them to our game. This is big; it is the key to personalization. It is the first step towards "news you can use." We had a successful beta of our first prototype and moved on. Now, we are on to our second project, which is our Blue Box, an "in the blue", pied-piper like system for our friends who create online games. The idea is to provide their community with information and knowledge about their game that is otherwise unavailable, and to do so in a way they can read, and an environment that many of them are already familiar with. Now we're onto our third project, a mobile app for our brand that will allow a gamer to play our mobile game, and then to send this data back to us via the built in GPS/GSM tracking technology. It will also send a screenshot every 30 seconds or so, allowing us to keep tabs on our players 24/7/
